Mayor McCoy's Statement On Tonight's Winter Storm

Vernon, Conn., -- Mayor Jason L. McCoy released the following statement regarding tonight's impending winter storm:

"In preparation for tonight's expected snowfall, Vernon Public Works crews have been pre-treating the road with salt and removing excess snow that accumulated from last week's storm. As always, our concern is to ensure that roadways are clear and accessible for commuters and emergency services. As soon as the snow begins to fall, crews will be prepared for fast and efficient cleanup to help keep the roads safe for the morning commute. Town Hall will remain open, regardless of the storm's impact, so that services can be provided to residents, if needed. I urge members of the community to help assist neighbors with snow removal on sidewalks and driveways as well as to use caution if they have to go out. In the event of an emergency, residents should call the Vernon Police Department."
